Continuation of 3. NOTE: Applicant argues that no new issues were raised by the last amendment. Any amendment to the claims that change the scope of the claims will require further search or consideration. This is different than a 'new issue/matter' problem, which applicant is correct in stating no new matter has been added, as support for the amendments to the claim language and specification can be found in paragraph 17 of the original specification. For the most part, the only additions to claims already presented that would not require further search and consideration are corrections in grammar. Also, because the claim and specification amendments of 6/25/09 were not entered, the subject matter added or deleted from those claims/specification and still in the claim/specification language needs to be shown with an underline or cross out, respectively. For the record, the last claims/specification entered, which are the claims/specification filed 3/25/09, are the ones pending in the application. One clear issue still in the claims, is that each claim must represent only one sentence, so that each claim will end with a period ('.'), but will not have more than one period in the claim.
